

THREE CONFESS TO POMEROY MURDER

TROTSKY ATTACKS UNITED STATES

AMERICA JUDGE AND MASTER OF EUROPE COMMUNIST STATES

Russia and United States Labor Thought To Clash, He Says

By United Press
NEW YORK, March 29.—
"American pacifism is a method of imperialistic robbery."

"General Charles G. Dawes bought Germany for $200,- 000,000 and put his controller on the neck of the German people."

"The United States is the judge and master of Europe."

Leon Trotsky, in a speech delivered February 15, and received in New York by today's mail, thus conjured up before the Russian masses a capitalistic-imperialistic bogey, representing the United States and he bade the Russians strike it down or perish.

The above quotations from the Soviet leader's speech epitomize
the communist appraisal of American altruism, individualism, statesmanship and aims.

Trotsky spoke to thousands in
the experimental theater of Moscow and the response was so great that the speech was repeated there
and was broadcast to millions who could not come to hear it.

Trotsky pictured the United States as a land of tremendous power and potentialities. He warned his hearers that:

"With all the realism that is the basis of our policy of education we do not try to under-estimate by one iota the powers of American capital."

The speaker began by explaining that Soviet Russia stands at the left of labor thought and the United States at the right. The two extremes must clash and only one can survive, he said. To defeat the United States is the inevitable conflict in communism, according to Trotsky, and must enlist the peoples of Europe to its theories.

Labor in the United States, Trotsky explained, deals the necessity of independent class organization. Therefore, American labor goes in for labor banks and insurance companies. These represent the basic economic forms of the new labor movement in the United States.

The American Federation of Labor, he said, had lost the greater part of its membership and now numbers only 2,800,000 workers, a
"negligible percentage" representing "the top layers of the working class."

On the platform in Moscow, Trotsky attempted to make Russia realize the vast productive and commercial machinery of the United States.
"Man always has been dearer than anything else in America," he said, hence the machinations of labor.

"America hardly knows the apprentice system, because it was impossible to waste time. Labor was too expensive. As a substitute for the apprentice system, labor processes have been divided into
the most minute parts, each one of which can be learned with a minimum amount of instruction. And what collects these minute parts of the labor process into a single whole? The endless trap, the con-veyor."

"The principle of American technique is not accidental. It was born of the inexhaustible richness of nature and the lack of hand labor. If I am not mistaken, there are now forty-five percent more men capable of labor in Europe than there are in America. And what is the result?"

"An American miner gets two
and one-half as much in America as in Europe. It was said of the Athenians that they were free people because each Athenian had four slaves. Every American man, woman and child has fifty slaves, mechanical slaves. If we count mechanical motion power, translate horsepower into human power and then multiply by ten it will come out that every American citizen, including even the babies, have fifty mechanical slaves."

FRANC HITS NEW LOW EXCHANGE MARK

LONDON, March 29.—The French franc today established a new low record in the London Bourse as Premier Briand's government in Paris entered upon a week which may result in its defeat and resignation.

At one time a pound sterling would buy 143 1-2 francs but a rally raised the exchange to 142 5-8.
Belgian francs sold for 125 and Italian lira for 121, both slumping in sympathy with French money. The closing price for French francs Saturday was 141.25; for Belgium francs 120.58 and for lira 120.82.

MUSSOLINI SPEAKS ON ANNIVERSARY OF ITALIAN FASCISTI

Forty Thousand Told Of Advantages Of Eight
Year Reign

ROME, March 29.—Premier Mussolini's black shirted fascists entered the eighth year of their organized existence today and all Italy resounded to the premier's speech which marked fascists' seventh birthday.

Approximately 40,000 uniformed fascists heard Mussolini speak Sunday at the villa Glori Hippodrome on the outskirts of Rome.
Amplifiers carried his words to all the assembly and millions of other persons throughout Italy
heard the speech by radio.

Mussolini warned the people to eliminate parliamentary democracy.
"We tell the responsible factors in other countries to do away with verbose parliamentarism," he said, "and to give more power to the executive and to place capital and labor on an equal footing as fascism has done, if they want to survive."

"Comrade," he continued, "I am proud to state that both you and I are profoundly indifferent to all that is said or printed abroad. It is perfectly logical that international democracy and liberalism are lined up against us. The best proof that we really effected a revolution lies in the counter-revolution which we crushed and which endeavors to sharpen its perfi-dious weapons abroad."

"Our program still is unchanged.
It is to fight. Life is an incessant fight for fascists. We accept that and will fight intrepidly.
We gave the Italian people laws defending the fascist revolution and restoring the national life, also special laws for the army. We are faced with problems of the future of the navy and aviation. All this has been done in one year."

Elopers Issue Bad Checks
When Funds Run
Short

NEW YORK, March 29.—What detectives termed a "tangle of love and larceny" was revealed with
the arrest of Mrs. Luis P. Berne, pretty wife of a plastic surgeon, her brother Elliott Jaffe and Paul Rosenthal, with whom she eloped more than a year ago.

This trio faces charges of passing $30,000 worth of bad checks in Florida. The number of arrests was increased to five when Dr. Berne and his father-in-law, Herman Jaffe were held after they had broken the camera of a newspaper photographer at police headquarters.

Mrs. Berne is alleged to have carried on a love affair with Rosenthal son of a wealthy shirt manufacturer. The money belonging to Dr.
Berne, which the eloping couple took with them, was exhausted in Florida and according to police story they resorted to worthless checks.

Jaffe, the brother who was involved in the case as a "chaperone" faces charges of illegally possessing a revolver and Mrs.
Berne and Rosenthal also will be arraigned for alleged violation of the Mann act.

FRENCH PRETENDER DIES IN OBSCURITY AT PALERMO, ITALY

tained Royal Claim
To Last

By United Press
PALERMO, Italy, Mar. 29.—A half forgotten chapter of French history came to public notice again today with announcement of the death of Philippe, Duke of Orleans, here.

He was the pretender to the throne of France. Never during his life had he admitted that he was not the rightful ruler of the French nation and he died leaving Prince Jean of Orleans, his cousin, heir to the title of "Pre-tender"—an heritage of doubtful value.

Duke Philippe Robert was at times almost forgotten as the man who claimed the throne of France but was always remembered for his escapades which often connected social scandal
with his name.

Pneumonia brought on death.
At his bedside was Amelia, his sister, Prince Jean, the new pre-tender, is enroute here.

The Duke of Orleans based his claims to the French throne on his descent from Louis Philippe, last king of France, whose reign ended in 1848. The Duke was a great grandson of Louis Philippe.

Only once during his lifetime
did he visit the country he sought to rule. On that occasion he was thrown into prison under military service laws, but was soon released, escorted to the border and told not to return.

The idea of royal authority was always strong with him and he
not long ago, while ill, and delirious in England, berated all about him for "holding prisoner
the king of France."

Eleven Year Old Bandit Victim Of Accident

CLEVELAND, O., March 29.— Steven Moggyordy, 11, described by the police as a "baby robber," was accidentally shot and killed with a stolen revolver, early today.
The shooting, according to detectives occurred as Steven and his brother Andrew, 20, returned home after looting the Macy Confectionery here.

The weapon, it was said, was among loot obtained by the brothers in the robbery. The little boy was examining the gun, police say, when it was accidentally discharged, the bullet entering his right eye.

Detectives, attracted to the Moggyordy home by the shot discovered the lad was shot.

Much loot from numerous roberies was found in the attic of the home.

ROOF IS DAMAGED

Fire originating from a chimney flue, burned a hole about thirty-five feet square in the shingle roof at the home of Mrs. Anna G. Howard 131 E. Main St. and did damage estimated at $100 at 12 o'clock Sunday noon. Loss is fully covered by insurance.

Firemen used a large and small
chemical to extinguish the blaze.

pressed the opinion an overdose
of headache medicine caused Mrs.

Prof. Hoskins is attached to the

Larger Auditorium Engaged for Gazette and Republican Free School Which Starts Tuesday—Miss
May Neville, Expert, In Charge

"Woman's place is in the home." The old slogan means something quite different than when it was first said. Now, instead of spending her day cooking and sewing, looking after the physical comforts of her family, the housewife must get such tasks off her hands with dispatch and attend to other duties brought on by our complex civilization.

MISS NEVILLE TELLS HOW
Miss May Neville, who will conduct the Gazette and Republican School of Cooking and Home Economics at the Opera House, four days, starting Tuesday, will tell women how they can make home attractive to husbands and children, and how to do it efficiently enough to reserve much time for themselves.

Miss Neville has conducted cooking schools in various parts of the country, and is prepared to tell the housewives how to keep their family healthy and happy and to make them delight in coming home to meals, to keep the home a pleasant living place for the family, rather than just a sleeping place.

BRIDES ARE FAVORED
Miss Neville's cooking lessons
and demonstrations have won the approval of housewives in all sections of the country. She has announced that she will give particular attention to brides during her classes.

Brides who buy their ham at
the delicatessen today will soon learn the art of baking a ham in their own ovens by the most simple and successful process.
Miss Neville's lessons will not be limited. They will include instructions in everything from how to make good coffee in an old-fashioned pot to how to make a crossword puzzle case. General cooking and baking, always with an eye to the easiest methods, will be taught, along with instruction in party cookery, table service, and dietetics.

Miss Neville will use cooking utensils and devices for simplifying labor that she has discovered most satisfactory after much experimentation. She will tell the housewives who attend the school secrets about the best kind of can opener, the best flour sifter, the best food products, and demonstrate why they are satisfactory.

MUST WATCH HUSBANDS Miss Neville will show the brides how they may prepare dishes that will make the home attractive to their husbands. They will not need to constantly resort to new hair bobs and new dresses to create an interest in the home.

The school will be conducted by The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the Opera House, demonstrations being made on the stage.
The school will open daily at 2:15 o'clock.

TOWN MARSHAL SHOT AND HURT IN PISTOL DUEL WITH BANDITS

Officer Interrupts Safe
Store

WEST MANSFIELD, O., Mar.
29.—Marshal Fay Middleworth was shot and seriously wounded
here early today in a pistol duel with two bandits, one of them was captured.
The bandits had just dynamited
the safe in the Huffman general store here when Middleworth swooped down upon them, according to the Marshal's version of the story.

Both robbers fled, maintaining a running gun fire as they sped
up the principal business street.
Middleworth retaliated but was brought down by a bullet in the shoulder.

Citizens drawn to the scene by
the shooting, captured Erven Courtney, 22, of Toledo. Courtney's companion escaped but was pursued by hastily organized posses.

The bullet which brought down
the Marshal was fired by the captured man's companion, Mid-dleworth said. Physicians said the officer will recover.

NELSONVILLE, O., Mar. 29.—A statewide campaign to re-open Ohio coal mines—with non-union labor if necessary, may be launched here the latter part of this week, it was declared here today.

On Friday or Saturday, Ohio
operators who sent a committee to Indianapolis in an effort to obtain consent from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers for modification of the Jacksonville agreement, will assemble here to hear the committee's report.

ADMINISTRATION IS AGAINST CHANGE IN PROHIBITION LAWS

Republicans Say Initiative Is Up To Democrats

WASHINGTON, Mar. 29.—The Coolidge administration believes the American people not ready to consider repeal or modification of the prohibition act, despite the result of the recent newspaper polls.
Administration leaders admit there is a genuine movement against the Volstead act but do not feel that it has yet reached such size as to become a party problem.

A spokesman for the administration told the United Press that although the newspaper polls showed an overwhelming sentiment for a change in the prohibition law, the pivotal states are little concerned over prohibition in the coming primaries and elections.

The east is always wet, he said and the states of Illinois and Missouri where the liquor question might become a political issue this fall, are controlled by the large cities, concealed wet centers.

Republican leaders feel that if prohibition must enter national politics, it must be advanced by the Democratic party. This is regarded a tremendous task, even by wet Democrats, as the country has never shown any desire to revise the present law. The Republican party following the cautious attitude, President Coolidge will wait until sentiment against the amendment becomes overwhelming before recommending a reform, a prominent Republican said.

EXAMPLE OF STILL MAKER'S ART

Federal prohibition agents are exhibiting a 1926 model still here. The still seized in a raid in Mansfield, has no coil.

It has two sections. The top compartment, holding cold water, contains an inverted cone.
The bottom of the still contains the boiling mash.

Clevo Angst, alleged inventor of the still, is at liberty under a bond of $3,500, pending his trial in federal court.
He was arrested by the federal agents who went on the raid in Mansfield last week.
They believe this still is one of
the newest type of "inventions"
of its kind.

Army Airmen in Record Flight

Double honors are accruing to Navigation Engineer Bradley
Jones (left) and Lieut. Lyman P. Whitten as a result of a non-stop flight they made from Dayton, O., to Boston, 725 miles, in five hours and 50 minutes. Not only did they establish a record for the distance, but they also proved the efficacy of new instruments intended to facilitate flying through fogs and above clouds. It was the first

Crabbe Denies Knowledge of Report—Attorney General Confers With Tracy as to Further
Inquiry Plans

By United Press
COLUMBUS, O., March 29.—
Attorney General Crabbe, upon his return today, denied having any knowledge of activities of federal internal revenue inspectors who were reported here checking income tax returns in connection with sales of equipment to the state highway department.

"I know nothing about them or
why they are here," said Crabbe.
"So far as I know there has been no request made for federal aid of any kind, in this investigation."

It was reported semi-officially today that federal officers were checking tax returns made by persons who sold thousands of dollars worth of tractors and other equipment to the highway department in which profits were said to have been excessive.

Such an inquiry it was believed
would be intended to disclose whether any commissions or profits were turned over to politicians as campaign contributions in exchange for contracts.

The attorney general today will confer with State Auditor Tracy, as to the next move in their inquiry.

A grand jury investigation of the department has been demanded by Major W. S. Pealer, a Columbus attorney, who says he represents a citizen's committee organized for the purpose of disclosing fraud in state departments.
Whether there will be an investigation of Pealer's supplemental charge that the state has lost thousands of dollars in automobile license funds interest was not known.

Gibson was discharged at the height of Governor Vic Donahey's
investigation of the state prohibition department. Subsequently he announced his candidacy on a platform advocating stringent modification of the dry laws.

The former dry officer's withdrawal followed a conference with
C. Homer Durand, Coshocton, "wet" candidate for governor in the last two Republican primaries. He intimidated Durand again will become a candidate.

"My withdrawal," Gibson said, "is to prevent the possible effect my candidacy may have had on the cause of liberalism."
Gibson indicated he may become a candidate for some other office.

PROBE MEXICAN LAND GRANT REPORT

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Re-by Chairman Borah and other members of the senate foreign re-

As a result she is believed to have attained the distinction of officially opening 1926 bathing season for the Great Lakes. While a party of men and women stood by shivering in their overcoats in the near freezing temperature, Miss

SUMMON GRAND JURY AFTER TRIO ADMITS M'CUMBER SLAYING

Assassins Hired For $30
Because Victim Knew
Too Much

By United Press
POMEROY, O., March 29.—
A special grand jury was summoned today to investigate the brutal murder of James McCumber, 65, whose body was found in an abandoned cistern three miles from his home.

The jury it was announced, will consider the alleged confessions of two hired assassins who have declared
John Bryant, a negro and supposed bootlegger, paid them $30 to dispose of McCumber.

Bryant and the two men, John Hedricks and Richard Rhoades, are under arrest. Confessions have been obtained from all three,
according to the county prosecutor.

The negro, it was declared today, sought McCumber's life because the aged man eavesdropped on a bootlegger's rendezvous near here.

Authorities also were probing
the mysterious death of Mrs.
Susan Rhoades and Mrs. Pearl
Smith, in connection with the arrest of the three.

Both women, who were fami-lar with operations of the illicit liquor traffic here, died under mysterious circumstances, police declare.

Mrs. Rhoades who was said to have feared for her life, was burned to death. Mrs. Smith, with her head crushed, was found lying at the foot of the stairway in her cellar.

McCumber, according to police,
was prepared to solve the two
mysteries when he was slain.

The negro's confession, as recounted by Rhoades, said in part:
"The whole thing was planned before hand. I decided to have a birthday party to establish an alibi. Hedricks and Rhoades, I offered $30 to carry out the actual killing."

"It was very simple. When the party was in full swing so I wouldn't be missed, I slipped out.
I met Hedricks and Rhoades,
paid them their money and told them the plans once more.

"We went to McCumber's door
and knocked. The organ in the house next door, was kicking up a lot of noise. No one could have heard us. When he came to the door, we hit him on the head."

"Hedricks and Rhoades started
walking him up the road to the cistern, where we had decided to hide the body. I went back to the party."

"Later Hedricks and Rhoades called me out and told me Mc-Cumber was dead."

Hedricks' confession then takes up the story.
"He begged for mercy. But we beat him over the head again and then Rhoades shot him. Then we tumbled the body into the cistern, covered it with leaves and returned to the city."

McCumber vanished on March 15. Blood-stained walls hinted at murder and the arrest of ten men, including the three held, followed.
All were released except Hed-ricks, Rhoades and Bryant.

LONDON, March 29.—The Prince of Wales was convalescent today in St. James Palace from an attack of influenza and an operation consisting of an incision in his left ear-drum.

The official bulletin announcing the successful operation, surprised the nation. The Prince's ear has been troubling him since Friday, following an attack of influenza
on Wednesday.

The attending physician explained that Wales condition was not serious and there was no cause for alarm.

Anonymous medical authorities informed the local press today that an operation such as Wales under-

then practiced law in Cleveland before he was made a judge here. It is his first official visit to Wooster.

Copyright, 1925, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

MARY WAITE shares two rooms with

CELIA STEWART, and works as a stenographer and general assistant in the office of

STANLEY BLAKE. Mary has few friends, but Celia goes out frequently in the evening, though she does not tell with whom. Mary finds that Celia and Stanley see each other frequently, although Stanley is married. Mary goes to supper with

PAT HAMILTON, whom she has met before but whose attentions she has refused because he is married, and sees Celia and Stanley at another table. Mrs. Blake learns that Stanley is going around with some girl, and thinks it is Mary. She telephones Mary, threatening to make trouble unless Mary leaves town at once. Celia disappears. Mary sees Hamilton again, and he arranges for her to go to New York and work for a friend of his. Mary goes to work in New York for

MRS. CRANDALL, a wealthy old man, and meets his son

WILL CRANDALL, who is very nice to her. She motors into the country with Will on Saturday afternoon, and they are stranded on a back road when the car runs out of gas.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XXXII—UNPLEASANT POSSIBILITIES

MARY followed Pat Hamilton across a corner of the hotel lobby to the dining-room, hardly realizing what she was doing.

VIOLET DARE

So she must be more like the Hewitt girls, must she, if she wanted Will to care for her. Hamilton knew the world well, she told herself; his advice would probably be good. And oh, how much she did want Will to care!

Yet he already cared, her heart told her. Yes, replied her mind, but how long would he care, and how much? These other girls, with their lovely clothes, their leisure in which to rest and make themselves attractive, their gay spirits that came from never working until they were exhausted—how soon would he turn to them?

"If he really loves me he'll go right on loving me, just as I am," she told herself, leaning back in her chair and staring down at the table while Hamilton ordered dinner. That was what she wanted to believe. But how sure could she be that it was true?

She tried hard to be entertaining when Hamilton turned to her again, to appreciate his efforts to give her a good time. But it was difficult. "Everything going all right? Old Crandall easy to work for?" he asked her. "Since you're bound to work I'd like you to be well fixed. But see here, Mary—think over what I said to you about doing a little better by yourself. You can afford to, with the salary you're getting from Crandall."

"I want to pay back the money I owe you," Mary told him. "After that I'll think about spending more on myself."

"Nonsense—you can take the rest of your life to pay me," he retorted. "Now, you could live at this hotel if you wanted to; I have a special arrangement with the manager, as you know, on some advertising he hasn't paid for—I take it out in staying here when I'm in town. I'll make that arrangement for you, so that you can get a little room somewhere here for just half what it would cost ordinarily. How does that sound? Then get yourself a few clothes, and—well, everything'll look up. You're too pretty to be wasted the way you are now." Mary said nothing. It was a tempting picture that Hamilton painted, one that she would have liked to make come true. But she was determined not to be further indebted to him.

Hamilton talked on and on; Mary was glad to have him do so because she did not want to talk herself. The sight of Will Crandall with the Hewitt girls had unnerved her, even though she had known that he was to spend the afternoon with them. After all, why should he care anything for her?

She spent the evening with Hamilton. After dinner they walked up Fifth Avenue; some of the shop windows were lighted and he kept pointing out things in them that she would have liked to have, asking her if she didn't think they were pretty.

"Of course, the windows that are curtained, that you can't see, are the ones that especially interest you, though," he remarked carelessly. "That's natural enough. What lovely things are in these shops! It's no wonder that a girl like you wants to have them—when they make so much difference in her life. Why, I've seen a girl completely transformed by one becoming hat."

Mary felt as if the tentacles of a giant octopus were slowly closing around her. She turned sharply to Hamilton.

"Would you mind taking me home?" she asked, and her voice trembled. "I'm so tired."

"Of course I'll take you home, though I'd hoped that you'd give me the entire evening," he replied courteously, and hailed a passing taxi.

Mr. Crandall left her alone the next morning, with enough work to keep her busy for days. She worked hard that she was surprised when her luncheon was brought in; she had not realized how late it was. She had just finished when Will Crandall opened the library door.

"Have a nice time last night?"

"Hullo," he said pleasantly. "Have a nice time last night? I tried my best to make you speak to me, but you wouldn't look my way at all when you came into the Diplomat. Was the man you were with so interesting?"

"Don't you know him?" Mary asked. "He's a friend of your father's—in fact, he got my position here for me."

"Oh—is that Pat Hamilton?" Will's voice changed as he uttered the name. It sounded as if the thought was unpleasant to him. "Is he a friend of yours?"

"Why, he—yes, he is!" Mary answered bravely. "He's done a great deal for me."

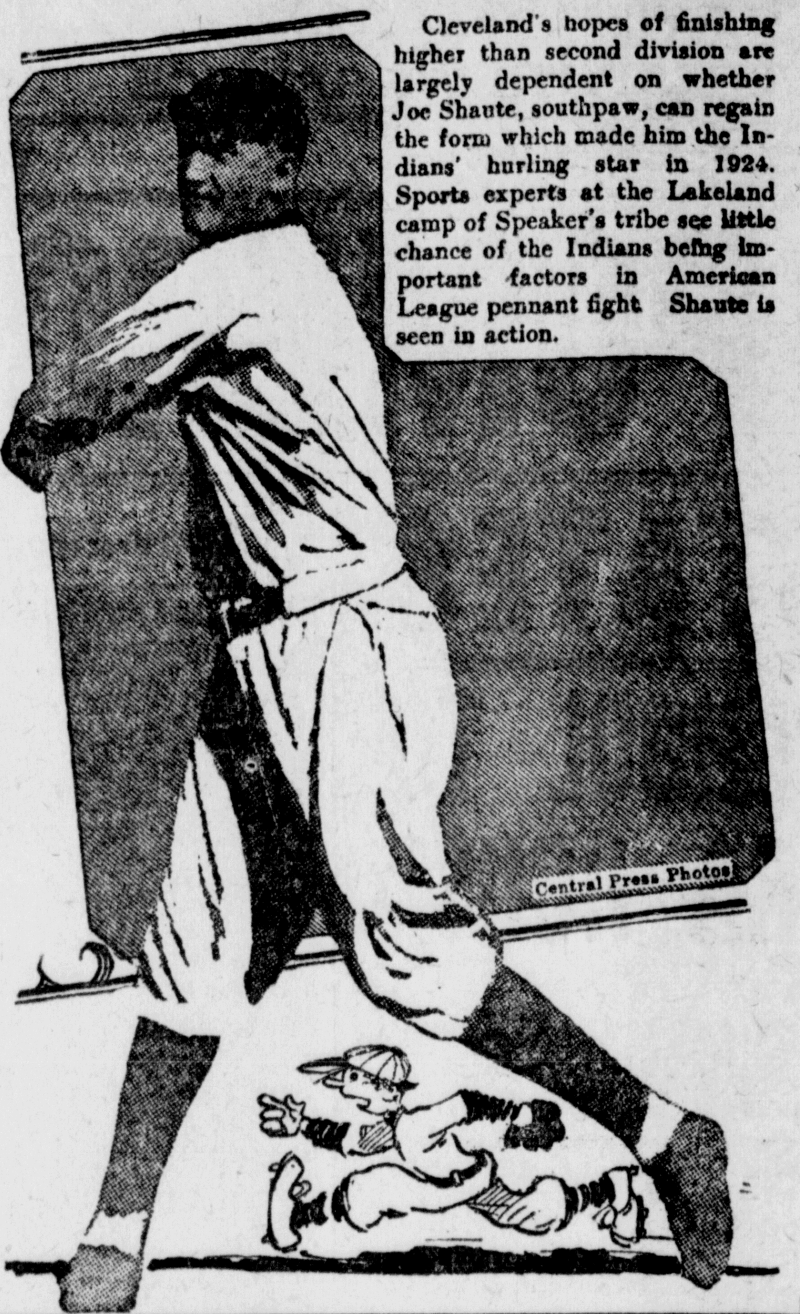

"Oh, I didn't know that." Suddenly he seemed miles away from Mary, as if a gulf that could not be crossed separated them.

"What's wrong with him?" she asked. "Oh, nothing. He just isn't the kind of person I'd expect you to know, that's all."

She realized that it was hopeless, to try to make him say anything more. She realized, too, that he was likely to think less of her than he had before because of her friendship for Pat Hamilton.

Tomorrow—A Surprise.

Cleveland's hopes of finishing higher than second division are largely dependent on whether Joe Shaute, southpaw, can regain the form which made him the Indians' hurling star in 1924. Sports experts at the Lakeland camp of Speaker's tribe see little chance of the Indians being important factors in American League pennant fight. Shaute is seen in action.

BY MY HALIDOM! FENCING, ONCE ONLY EUROPEAN, MAY BE REVIVED IN U. S.

Is the gentle art of fencing going to stage a come-back?

Now then a certain quality of gentlemen carry ugly black automatics in their hip-pockets and arguments are settled on the spur of the moment and on the quickness of the draw without waiting for sunrise or the arrival of the police.

But, thanks to Hollywood, Douglas Fairbanks and a couple of dozen fencing instructors who have invaded this country in the wake of the movies, there seem indications that the use of the fencing sword will be revived as a pastime of the idle sportsman if not for bloodier purposes.

In its infancy, fencing was an art of the lower classes but when med-

Italian method requiring more physical movement and the French great ability and quickness of the wrist and arm. The German method is even more strenuous than the Italian.

The sport has definite and elaborate rules and a strict system of etiquette. The ordinary fencing rapier is from thirty-three to thirty-four inches in length and of course the point only is used. The sabre is still the cutting weapon however, with a technique of its own.

Because contracts of motion picture stars almost always call for proficiency in fencing, many of the best instructors are located in Los Angeles and Hollywood. Fairbanks in his new picture, "The Black Pirate," and in another recent picture, "Don Q. Son of Zorro," proved he has attained excellency in swordsmanship.

An increasing number of athletic clubs also are adopting the sport and it may be that in the future, America will produce swordmen to rival those of Europe, where fencing is a national sport in many countries.

STATESMAN VS. VOTE-GETTER

PROFESSOR Edgar Furness, of the Yale political science department, is optimistic on the future of politics and government in the United States. He doesn't predict a revolution nor sudden revolutionary change for the better, but sees the nation politically, in process of evolution.

He is confident that "soon there will be a change in governmental activity in the United States, and public service will be raised to a higher plane." Perhaps this hope is based on his second prediction that "the time is not far off when a life of politics will meet more approval than it does at the present time."

Professor Furness blames prevailing political conditions and the too common disrespect for and distrust of officeholders and politicians upon democracy's tendency to put a premium on mediocrity. His observations convince him that "men of ability are often looked upon as being removed from the true spirit of the nation. They are even thought undemocratic in that they are not sharing their honors and distinction with the common people."

Too often the men and women peculiarly qualified to solve the intricate problems of government are not shrewd enough politicians to have themselves elected to office, a condition that cannot be abated until the majority of the voters is able to discern unerringly between the "vote-getter" and the statesman or political scientist. The government in a republic is what the people make it. Better governmental executives and wiser legislators mean better government.

KITCHEN OF A GODDESS

ARCHAEOLOGISTS burst forth in extravagant praises of a fragment of a crudely shaped and painted urn dug from the dust of 4,000 years, while the unscientific lady usually pays only a dispassionate homage to even more ancient and far more magnificent temples and tombs. There are exceptions, when the heart of the ordinary man beats as rapidly as that of the antiquarian, and one such exception was the discovery of a kitchen in the temple of the moon goddess at Ur.

The old kitchen was more spacious, if not better, than modern tuck-away kitchenettes and in some respects equaled the latter in convenience. It had a brick and asphalt floor with a well sunk in its center. The cook stoves, for burning wood and charcoal, were not as clean and efficient as the modern gas and electric appliances, but they must have boiled and grilled dishes fit for kings and even goddesses.

Simplified housekeeping, small households, and the delicatessen store have combined to do away with the large old-fashioned kitchen, once a typical American institution and center of the house, but it still holds an affectionate place in memory.

The discovery of the kitchen at Ur must have revived in the minds of countless Americans sweet memories of those "dim, dead days beyond recall" when the kitchen was the cornerstone of the great American home.

THE COMMUNITY'S HEALTH

THERE is not a person in this city, or country either for that matter, who is not vitally concerned in the health of the community. It is important that the most rigid sanitary regulations should have force not only here but in every city throughout this country. For epidemics of disease can be kept to a minimum. They are the greatest wasters of life.

A pre-war estimate by a leading sanitarian places the average value of a human life at $3,600, and the average cost of medical attention and nursing care for each case of typhoid fever, for instance, at $200. On this basis in one small town epidemic, 55 cases of typhoid cost $11,000 and in addition the loss of vital capital because of six deaths was $21,600.

There is a lot of money to be taken out of a community. Let us not consider it even from a humanitarian standpoint. It is really not good business policy to let such things happen. Public health is purchasable. Within natural limits every community can determine its own death rate.

Modern health methods include infant welfare, child welfare, prevention of communicable diseases and the sanitation of the community. Money invested in public health pays a dividend to every member of the community. A healthful community will not only have more money to spend on the necessities and luxuries of life, but it will attract trade from a wider territory. Health is a business proposition.

CHARITY BRATS

So some thoughtless neighbors spoke of the children of one of our families. It grieves us. Unfortunately, the beautiful old word "Charity" has fallen into evil ways with the public. It seems to mean the doling out of relief by lantern jawed investigators and social detectives to those persons whom they deem "worthy." God help us! Are not all men worthy of friendly service and encouragement? Is not material relief simply a sort of morphine which never cures but only temporarily relieves the pain, while other treatment is being applied to restore the social health? Because of the public degradation of the word "charity," many associations have recently changed their names. Our own name, Social Service League, should more truly represent the

A few years ago the League was caring for an aged couple. The man was ill unto death, yet many good people criticized the League because they spent time and money on such "unworthy" people. This case came to the attention of one of Xenia's "noble men" who came to the League and advanced money for one month's rent for this couple. We afterward heard that this gentleman said he was interested in the "unworthy" poor. Truly such a spirit is most refreshing to discouraged social workers.

AN EASTER PARTY

The week following Easter Sunday is a popular time for giving an Easter Party. Daffodils, tulips, narcissus or violets lend themselves ideally for either house or table decoration. Or if the hostess cannot afford real flowers, she may decorate bare tree boughs with artificial leaves and paper blossoms to suit her fancy. The successful hostess is she who never fails in originality.

Dancing to the phonograph or radio is popular among the young folks; often older people prefer auction bridge; but many find an evening of ridiculous games and contests the most fun of all. Try the following:

Millinery Contest: From your friends and neighbors collect as many old hats as there are to be guests. Heap these on a table in the living room. Explain to your guests that each player, at a signal from you, is to snatch up a hat—any hat—(except that the men must snatch men's hats, and the women women's) and rush with it to the opposite wall of the room, where you have hung several mirrors; he or she must put on the hat before the mirror.

Easter Egg Contest: This is an old game, but still a popular one. Color oval pieces of cardboard with crayons to represent colored eggs. Hide these all over several rooms. He or she who finds the most paper eggs before a signal rings to announce the hunt up, wins a candy egg as a prize.

Pussy Willow Contest: Give everybody a pencil and a sheet of paper with a pussy willow pasted in one corner. See who can write the most words beginning with "cat" or having "cat" as one syllable, in five minutes.

Devilled Eggs, sandwiches cut in egg shape, cup cakes topped with tiny cotton rabbits (stuck into the icing by means of a long pin) and coffee, will make suitable refreshments.

A GOLFER'S HEAVEN
A golfer's dream of heaven is a rolling course, I think. Where all his twenty-footer putts roll to the cup and sink. There may be bunkers on it, and there may be pits of sand. But in them, as he plays the game, his good shots never land. A golfer's dream of heaven is a drive without a slice. An iron shot that holds the line, and lies forever nice.

Yet if there's golf in heaven, and all golfers good arrive, And each one is rewarded with that blessed perfect drive; If no one shanks a mashie, and no spirit ever peeks, If the golf balls fly from brassies and from jiggers and from cleeks, And they carry pits and bunkers and drop stony at the cup, There will never be an angel who can boast that he's one up.

Then the other sainted golfer will be good as you and I, He will drive as far we do, and he'll find as nice a lie, And we'll never see him bunkered, and we'll never see him slice, And he'll sink his twenty-footers, which will not be very nice. So a golfer's dream of heaven isn't one that I would choose. For there'd be no fun in playing if there's no one there to lose.

STORY OF JENNIE COWAN

One of the most tragic and pathetic stories of the days of Indian occupancy of this section of Ohio at the time when the Shawnee village at Oldtown was in its ascendancy, was the remarkable adventure of Mrs. Jennie Cowan, great-grand aunt of the late Rev. James G. Carson, former pastor of the Second United Presbyterian Church in Xenia.

During the middle eighties of the eighteenth century, when Jennie Cowan with her husband and young daughter, were living with her family in the settlement surrounding the pioneer fort of what is now Blunt County, Tennessee, a band of Shawnees invaded the settlement, killed and scalped the men and took the women prisoners, including Mrs. Cowan.

She was taken by her savage captors to headquarters of the tribe at Oldtown. As a gruesome punishment, she was compelled to carry the scalp of her husband, who was slain during the fighting.

Mrs. Cowan was forced to serve an old squaw during her captivity and subjected to cruel treatment and drudgery.

For seven years Jennie Cowan was held captive at the Shawnee village. She won the admiration of one of the Shawnee braves but refused his offer of marriage. His open admiration did not abate and found tangible expression in arranging for her to escape.

He planned for a shooting match at his station on the Mad River and appointed a comrade and a young Indian woman there to meet the captive secretly and conduct her safely to Ft. Detroit.

After remarkable experiences during the trip in which she barely evaded recapture, Jennie Cowan finally made her way to her former home in Tennessee.

Not long after her return to her old home, she was married to a settler. Two years later a marauding band of Cherokees from the Georgia country, again took her captive. Her daughter was also taken away. They were held in captivity for two years.

After nine years among the red-skins, the woman was released through an exchange of captives between the whites and Indians.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

MODISH MITZI—It's What They Call The Page Boy Silhouette BY J. V. JAY

"Fascinating, isn't it?" asks Mitzi and Dad repulseless-mindedly, "quite mediaeval." It doesn't seem just the word, but Mitzi and Polly are too polite to contradict. It doesn't occur to them that Dad's interest in a piece of statuary is necessarily slight if there also happens to be a pretty girl in sight. The lady (extreme right) wears a dress that evidently derived its inspiration from some crusading gentleman's best fighting clothes. This is only one of the mediaeval phenomena that are appearing in the styles for spring and summer.

Polly and Mitzi themselves offer two notable examples of this tendency to glorify, not middle age, but the middle ages. They are both wearing dresses cut according to the new Page Boy silhouette—a trimly fitted bodice, a waistline nearly normal, a short flaring pelum and a short straight skirt. Eleanor, who has joined the party, is doing her share of the proper thing by wearing another mediaeval frock—with a full shield emblazoned on the front—reminiscent of the days when stripes were not considered disgraceful. Even her hat is a helmet!

THE SURE THINGS

The sure things in this life come after we have gone along. If we could understand the secret back of the beauty of the pansy, it would no longer have charm for us. Character is beautiful because there is mystery behind it—latent strength, uncovered knowledge, vastness of vision, buried interest.

In the Bible there is this phrase: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." We go to sleep in faith and arise to the new things of an undiscovered day. It is only as we accept the opportunity for exploration that we grow and enlarge all that we are.

If we could see the results of all our strivings before they were under way, we would become weaklings, afraid and full of trembling lest of the time. It is the very fact that we are called upon to dare, to risk and to hope that teaches us not to falter under fire.

There is a great deal of God in a man when he looks upon tea as something to be smiled at and passed by.

Steel of the highest order must go through the most intense heat and be tried. All its weak dross must be melted away.

Character must go through the same process. But we are our own architects. We make our own plans and build the places we live in. They are an expression of what we are and represent.

The safe and sure things should be for the other fellow—not for you!

FARRELL BELIEVES REDS CONTENDERS IN NATIONAL LOOP

By HENRY L. FARRELL
NEW YORK, Mar. 29.—Two wide open pennant races are in prospect as the major league teams leave the training camps and start northward for the opening of the season.

In the National League the champion Pittsburgh Pirates, the New York Giants, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds appear to be sure contenders and the fight in the American League will be made by the Champion Senators, the Philadelphia Athletics, the St. Louis Browns and perhaps the New York Yankees.

Among the officials who are optimistic about the coming season, John A. Heydler, president of the National League is most enthusiastic.

"Competition" he said, "develops interest in the game and there should be plenty of competition in each league this season."

"I notice a disposition of the critics to consider only four teams in our league, but I will go further than that. I think that the Brooklyn and Boston clubs are among the contenders."

"Practically every team in the league has been improved by the adoption of one or more good young players. The Pirates didn't need much improvement and neither did the Giants but they are better clubs than they were last year."

"The Boston Club is being rebuilt almost entirely and it is a good club of young hustlers under a smart manager. The Brooklyn Club has infield troubles, but it has a remarkable pitching staff."

"I wouldn't attempt to pick the pennant winner in our league because I don't know and I don't believe any manager in the league is certain he is going to win the championship."

General opinion expressed in the south favored the Senators, Athletics and the Browns to fight it out for the American League pennant but the Yankees have developed so well that they look like contenders. The Yank pitchers have come along fine and Koenig and Lazzeri apparently have solved the infield problem.

The Athletics will start with the same team that made such a desperate fight for the pennant last year and with the exception of Johnny Tobin in right field, and Joe Bush on the pitching staff, the Senators will play with the same team that copped last year.

The Browns, if Mellilo continues to star at second base, will be a stronger team and some of the young pitchers ought to be better.

MODERN FARM HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY AT NOON

Ten-room, two-story frame home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Clemmer, on their farm, four miles east of Jamestown at Rosemore station, was entirely destroyed by fire, Saturday noon.

Cause of the blaze has not been determined but it is thought that fire under chicken incubators in the rear of the house, started the conflagration. The blaze was discovered at 11 o'clock by Mrs. Clemmer and she and her husband sought the assistance of neighbors. Fire quickly spread over the entire structure and only furniture on the first floor was salvaged.

Barn and other farm buildings standing some distance from the house were saved from the flames by neighbors who operated an electric water pump.

The Clemmer home was entirely modern and was one of the most attractive in the vicinity. Loss was partially insured. Mr. and Mrs. Clemmer are living in a tenant house on the farm.

AGED RESIDENT IS CALLED BY DEATH

Mrs. Charlotte Griesbaum, 85, widow of Joseph Griesbaum, passed away at her residence, 701 W. Second St., Saturday evening at 6:15 o'clock. Death was the result of infirmities of age.

Mrs. Griesbaum was born in Adelshelm, Germany, October 30, 1840 and came to the United States in 1886. She resided in Cincinnati until 1888. Her marriage to Henry Garland took place in Cincinnati and they later moved to Xenia.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. T. J. Kennedy, W. Market St., by her first marriage and one son, Charles W. Griesbaum, W. Second St., by her second marriage. Mr. Griesbaum preceded her in death several years.

Funeral services will be held at the residence, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Mrs. Griesbaum was a member of First Reformed Church and her pastor, the Rev. D. A. Seiders, will have charge of the services. Friends may call at the residence after 7 o'clock Monday evening.

NO ESCORT LEAGUE NOW ORGANIZED BY CALIFORNIA CO-EDS

BERKELEY, Cal., March 29—Feminine freedom—that's what these individualistic co-eds want. On the rolls beneath the names of Carrie Chapman Catt and Emmeline Pankhurst will be inscribed the names of Geraldine Casati Katherine Nixon, Gertrude Wright and Helen Phillips.

They are University of California students who have solved the "man problem" by declaring independence to it. They are leaders of Gamma Epsilon Pi and Phi Chi Theta societies whose membership embraces some of the university's most prominent and popular co-eds.

Rebellious at the very idea of sitting around waiting for patronizing men to invite them to dances and parties, they have inaugurated a "no escort league." The girls have taken solemn pledges that they will attend college functions unaccompanied by any masculine guidance.

After the female minds of the campus have been educated to the idea so that it will be more or less generally accepted as a matter of course, these original thinkers will make the revolutionary proposal that the ladies alone do the bidding, inviting such men as they please to escort them.

That is—they will if their first declaration of independence "takes."

Child's Harmless Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

When a child is constipated, has wind-colic, feverish breath, coated tongue, sour stomach, or diarrhea, a half teaspoonful of genuine "California Fig Syrup" promptly moves the poisons, gases, bile, souring food and waste right out of the little bowels. Never cramps or overacts. Babies love its delicious taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has full directions for infants and children plainly printed on bottle. Always say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. adv.

Higher Than the Woolworth Tower

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is the highest building in the United States.

All the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in 1925 could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building. And there would be enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

In every little village as in every thriving city along the route, there are enthusiastic women who are glad to tell others how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them. adv.

WHAT MY RELIGION MEANS TO ME

WM. H. TILFORD
First Presbyterian Church
My Religion is "Christianity."
A Christianity which implies—

"the kind of life whose spirit and method reproduce as accurately as possible the Spirit and Method of the Life of Christ."

My religion means to me, an appreciation of the God of "The Bible"; as revealed therein, as Creator, as our Heavenly Father, as a Living Moving Spirit within the realm of the human. A fellowship of a spiritual relationship with the Son of God—Jesus Christ. The fellowship being contingent on a previous redemption from the guilt and infirmities of sin; with a subsequent reconciliation of my life with God.

My religion means to me, an appreciation of Man. Christianity evaluated a human life on earth, and made it priceless, as to the soul, in relation to Eternity. My religion means that every aspiration of the Soul of man shall be compensated in an Everlasting Life. This appreciation of man prompts the belief in the possibility of the Salvation of Man, material and spiritual, unmindful of race or color. Christianity is a great civilizing force in the world.

My religion means to me, a Faith in the eternal rightness of (The Beneficent, Providential, God-directed universe of matter, man and spirit; submissive to all that is beyond the touch of man, un-submissive when within the reach of man's power to modify or change apparent inevitableness. Man is God's agent in man's sphere.

Practically—My religion means to me, kindness of purpose, sincerity of motive, helpfulness, forgiveness, co-operativeness, a desire to heal the wounds of the world, but to Christianize those who make the wounds. A daily living in a Fellowship with Christ as his agent to extend the helping hand to all in need, giving a word of encouragement to the fallen, performing a deed of kindness to the suffering, extending a hand in pity to those whose conduct has led them astray. Following as far as humanly possible the description of our Ideal Christ—"He went about doing good." That we might "Go about doing good."

This is "What My Religion means to me." The expression may be better than the living, but our daily prayer is that I and others would live, "What my Religion means to me."

Pasteurized Milk Is The Only Safe Milk

The Only Pure Milk
Is Milk That Has Been PASTEURIZED

Raw milk, in spite of the most careful handling, is not free from germs. This has been fully demonstrated by the most careful scientific tests. Proper pasteurization of milk destroys any pathogenic organisms which might be present in raw milk and these bacteria cause tuberculosis, typhoid, scarlet fever and diphtheria. On the other hand pasteurization does not destroy the natural healthful organisms in the milk nor does it mar its fresh, sweet flavor.

Since milk is absolutely essential to the physical development of children and the health of adults it is imperative that safe milk be available at all times.

HELEN SANTMYER TELLS ABOUT LADY ASTOR'S DANCE IN LETTER

Miss Helen Santmyer, author of "Herbs and Apples," daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Santmyer, W. Third St., who has been in London doing literary work for several months, was a guest at a dance given by Viscountess Astor at her home, 4 St. James Square, London, March 15.

Graphic account of the dance, in Miss Santmyer's individual style is given in a letter received from her by her father. Excerpts from the letter are as follows:

"Marj (her London companion) and I went together at about 10:30, taxied, alighted at the end of an avenue surrounded by a railing and admiring throng. Of course the house—4 St. James Square—is a huge and magnificent place, the sort of house I had never been in before until after it had been turned into a museum. The dressing rooms were on the first floor—we checked our coats and went up a stupendous staircase with shaking knees. But they needn't have shaken. Lady Astor's secretary showed us outside the ballroom door—you told him your name, he shouted it to her where she stood in the door—and he had evidently scanned the names carefully, because he got them the first time. Unusual, in a receiving line."

"Lady Astor, is a most amusing and remarkable person; short, slight, fair, very lovely looking, of course, as everyone knows, but with a raucous voice like a foghorn. A really dreadful voice—due to public speaking no doubt—as American as Plymouth Rock, with no English accent—yet in spite of its hoarseness and loudness, not unpleasant—simply funny. When you heard it at the other end of the hall room, it didn't make you shudder, it simply made you laugh. She wore a cloth of gold dress, very simple, with a short flaring skirt, and her diamond coronet, which wasn't so impressive as it might have been, because it wouldn't stay on straight—the peak of it generally rose above one eyebrow. Before the evening had advanced very far she removed it and went around the rest of the night with untidy hair and red marks on her forehead. She is very half-fellow-well-met, yet not displeasingly so. I suppose she's a good politician—but she is certainly a captivating person. And such vitality! Her husband was there—of course—a nice looking man—I mean, one who looks nice and her oldest son, who is at Oxford."

"When we were first there the floor was packed and jammed and we couldn't see anyone we knew—but it was an exceedingly well managed dance and no women were left standing on the side-lines. Mrs. Wiley, the wife of the head, manager or whatever you call it, was there to see that the boys were introduced to the girls and the result was that after the first few minutes you weren't alone for the rest of the evening. The first boy you danced with passed you on to another. I must say that nationalities didn't mix much—English danced with English and Americans with Americans. I was dancing when the Prince came in, just beside the door, so I saw Lady Astor court to him and when he danced with her they were right next to us, elbow to elbow. In fact, I may have stepped on his toes because I was dancing with a short boy who couldn't see over me and didn't know who was behind us and they were so close I couldn't tell him."

"The Prince looks very fagged and old—white-faced with blood-shot eyes. The number of things he has to appear at is enough to send him into an early grave. He is small like his father, shorter than I and very slight. He danced only a little while, upstairs at least. I believe he had supper downstairs in the dining room where the nobility and royalty were fed. The rest of us ate and drank in between dances at a long table spread with cakes and sandwiches in a vast room across the stair hall from the ballroom. Lady Astor being a prohibitionist, the drinks were only lemonade, orangeade and a very mild claret cup. It was not a disorderly party!"

"The celebrities whom I recognized and who were pointed out to me were Sir James Barrie, the Baldwins, the editor of the Times, whose name no one knew, because Lady Astor introduced him as 'that horrible man who edits the Times.' He is short, stocky, rather nice looking, with the smallest feet I have ever seen on human male. Mr. Amoy, who is foreign secretary or something of the sort, a tiny man, about up to my shoulder, who bobs like a cork when he dances; the Countess of Clarendon, who is a very pretty, quiet woman who stood on the side-lines and watched her daughter dance, and the Duchess of Atholl, who is the ideal English duchess—untidy white hair, short, plump, a Victorian as to figure and dress. Of course none of these people stayed late, only the younger ones were dancing at three and they would probably have had to put her foot down. She said, 'We'll have one more dance, then 'God Save the King,' and then you'll go home, every man jack of you.' So we had one more dance, then she got every one into a ring, we sang 'Auld Lang Syne' the orchestra played 'God Save the King' and we departed. Lady Astor remarked as she shook hands at the door that she 'never could get people to go home without playing 'God Save the King.' She is a rare woman."

"The party was fun because when you heard comments dropping around you on the ballroom floor about Locarno and Geneva, etc, etc you really wanted to listen, because you thought 'these are the people who are running that show.' The editor of the Times said the League of Nations crisis would be settled by Wednesday—Lady Astor replied, 'We Americans were right—we knew you would only get into trouble by mixing with those organ grinders.'"

"I could just go on and on like this forever, but I must stop now."

HOMER SPAHR DIES SUNDAY; SAW ACTIVE SERVICE OVERSEAS

Homer Carl Spahr, 37, well known Xenia man, died at the home of his parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Smith, 137 E. Third St., Sunday morning at 9:57 o'clock. Mr. Spahr had been in poor health for the past three years, as the result of being gassed while serving overseas in the World War.

He was employed as clerk in the inspection department of the National Cash Register Co., Dayton, and was able to work until four weeks ago. Since that time his health has failed rapidly.

Mr. Spahr was born on a farm southeast of Xenia, the son of Robert and Martha Spahr. His marriage to Miss Helen Louise Smith took place nine years ago. He was a member of old Company I, O. N. G., Third Regiment, and was commissioned first lieutenant in that outfit, serving on the Mexican border. That company later became a unit of the 148th Infantry, Thirty-seventh Division and after being stationed at Camp Sherman and Camp Sheridan, Montgomery, Ala., Mr. Spahr was sent overseas early in the war. He served in the most important engagements and was gassed in the Argonne. He also took part in Chateau Thierry and other battles.

Mr. Spahr is survived by his widow, his father, Robert Spahr, and the following brothers and sisters: Ralph Spahr, Stone Road; Sherwin Spahr, Hill St.; Howard Spahr, Dayton; Lester Spahr, Columbus; Albert Spahr, Xenia; Blaine Spahr, Clifton; Earle Spahr, Columbus; Mrs. Fannie Ledbetter, Dayton; Mrs. Lester Bickett, Remington, Ind. His mother died Christmas Day.

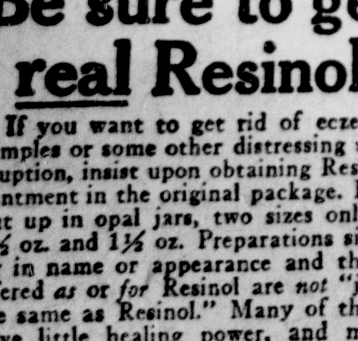

Mr. Spahr was a member of Joseph P. Foody Post, American Legion and of Trinity M. E. Church, since a child. He was former adjutant of Foody Post. Funeral services will be held at the Smith residence, E. Third St., Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call after 7 o'clock Tuesday evening.

The Theatre

Because he was a great pantomimist he was not fit to be a picture star. So they hardened their hearts against him and couldn't "see" him on the screen. After years of pathetic pleas for a chance to show what he could do in the movies W. C. Fields, riot on the vaudeville stage and "Follies" headliner has scored a "knockout" in filmdom.

It is understood that Fields' contract with Famous Players calls for a salary payment of $400,000 for six pictures and it is predicted that he will withdraw from Ziegfeld's "Follies" to start work in pictures.

Fields has come to the great goal after twenty-five years of lonely wandering. "After tramping all over the civilized world the magic wand of the movies has delivered Bill such a wallop on the shoulder that his whole frame is quivering," says the Literary Digest.

For the past ten years he has been playing in the Ziegfeld "Follies" on Broadway, and still he couldn't get into the movies. Before that he was a vaudeville actor who did an act alone in front of the curtain. He is one of the world's best pantomimists. After traveling over the world making people laugh and never saying a word, he was given a Broadway chance with the "Follies." For eight years, from 1914 to 1922, he played his comedy turn with them, jumped for a year to another producer and then into a straight play. His chance to speak had come.

D. W. Griffith bought the picture rights to the play in which Fields was working. He engaged Fields and last summer they

FRANK CATON, CZAR NICHOLAS' FRIEND, SUCCUMBS RECENTLY

CLEVELAND, O., Mar. 29.—Frank Caton, who was a personal friend of Nicholas, the czar of the Russians, and who won millions of dollars for the royal family, while it was in its heyday of monarchical supremacy, has passed away at the age of 74.

Caton was one of the most colorful figures in the racing world. Born in Northville, Mich., September 3, 1852, Caton was the son of John D. Caton. The elder Caton together with the famous General Custer of "Last Stand" renown, owned running horses together.

Before he was 16, young Frank was running horses in the famous "Quarter" races, the old Indian fighter staged with John Caton. It was there, under Custer's expert knowledge and tutelage, that Frank Caton learned Serrandi in payment of liquor fine, was arrested once before and sentenced to the workhouse for 20 days. He was charged with having taken $90 in lieu of a liquor fine, according to police.

Prosecutor E. C. Stanton, who gathered the evidence in Hollister's case is conducting investigations of dry raiding activities of justice of the peace Ayers.

When he became too heavy to ride in the saddle he turned to training harness horses. Incidentally, when Frank was in England in 1873, he rowed No. 4 on the winning American barge in the noted race between England and America of that year.

From 1873 to 1881, he raced and trained harness horses for his brother, Sam, in the United States, and helped in no small degree, to put harness racing on the American turf. In 1881, he came to Cleveland and was employed to race and train horses for the Forest City farm, owned by C. F. Emery. On the site of the Emery farm, now stands the famous beautiful North Randall race track of the Grand Circuit. Emery sent Caton to Russia with twenty head of thoroughbreds, the best being Winterset and Wintergreen, which won many races in Russia. Caton returned to Cleveland in 1893 but went back to the land of the czar in 1894. In 1902, he was presented to the czar, and became his favorite trainer. The czar's sport-loving brother, Grand Duke Michael, took a liking to Caton, and for many years, racing for royalty, he won millions of dollars in purses for the czar and the grand duke.

With the establishment of the Soviet regime and the overthrow of the nobility, Caton returned to America, having lost his money, and horses in the upheaval. He spent the rest of his years in Cleveland.

"E" BRAND SWEET CORN

More than any other vegetable, corn has a history so picturesque as to invest it with something very like romance. Corn was eaten by the Indians for centuries before the vessels of Columbus touched this continent. The Puritans found baskets of corn hidden about the graves of the Indians. The friendly Red Men brought corn to these hardy adventurers as a peace offering and taught the Pilgrims how to raise and cook it. Ever since Colonial days, corn, the "one purely American vegetable," has been a favorite with the American housewife.

Grown in the rich bottom lands of the Miami Valley and canned with a perfection that is unequalled by the most skillful home canning "E" BRAND SWEET CORN is a rare treat in its tenderness, sweetness and freshness of flavor. It is carefully sorted by experts and only the corn that is tender, juicy and at just the right stage for canning is ever used. After sorting it is put in a large revolving iron cage upon which streams of water play constantly and is washed thoroughly. After it is washed no hands touch the corn until you open the shining cans in your own kitchen. It is absolutely clean and is free from silks or bits of cob.

Russia and United States
Clash, He Says

By United Press
NEW YORK, March 29.—
"American pacifism is a method of imperialistic robbery."
General Charles G. Dawes bought Germany for $200,- 000,000 and put his controller
people.
"The United States is the judge and master of Europe."
Leon Trotsky, in a speech
delivered February 15, and received in New York by today's mail, thus conjured up before the Russian masses a capitalistic-imperialistic bogey, representing the United States and he bade the Russians strike it down or perish.

The above quotations from the Soviet leader's speech epitomize
the communist appraisal of American altruism, individualism, statesmanship and aims.
Trotsky spoke to thousands in
the experimental theater of Moscow and the response was so great
and was broadcast to millions who

States as a land of tremendous
power and potentialities. He warned his hearers that:
"With all the realism that is the
do not try to underestimate by
capital."

The speaker began by explaining
that Soviet Russia stands at the left of labor thought and the United States at the right. The two extremes must clash and only one
can survive, he said. To defeat
the United States is the inevitable
conflict in communism, according
to Trotsky, and must enlist the peoples of Europe to its theories.

Communism in the United States, Trotsky explained, denies the necessity of independent class organization. Therefore, American labor
goes in for labor banks and insurance companies. These represent
the basic economic forms of the
States.

The American Federation of Labor, he said, had lost the greater
numbers only 2,800,000 workers, a
"negligible percentage" representing "the top layers of the working class."

On the platform in Moscow, Trotsky attempted to make Russia realize the vast productive and commercial machinery of the United States.
"Man always has been dearer
said, hence the machinations of
labor.

"America hardly knows the ap-
prentice system, because it was impossible to waste time. Labor was too expensive. As a substitute for the apprentice system, labor
processes have been divided into
the most minute parts, each one of which can be learned with a minimum amount of instruction. And
what collects these minute parts
of the labor process into a single whole? The endless trap, the con-veyor."

The principle of American technique is not accidental. It was born
of the inexhaustible richness of nature and the lack of hand labor. If I am not mistaken, there are now
forty-five percent more men
capable of labor in Europe than
there are in America. And what is the result?

"An American miner gets two
and one-half as much in America
as in Europe. It was said of the Athenians that they were free people because each Athenian had four
slaves. Every American man, woman and child has fifty slaves, mechanical slaves. If we count me-
horsepower into human power and
then multiply by ten it will come
out that every American citizen,
mechanical slaves."

MUSSOLINI SPEAKS ON ANNIVERSARY OF ITALIAN FASCISTI

Forty Thousand Told Of

ROME, March 29.—Premier Mussolini's black shirted fascists
entered the eighth year of their
organized existence today and all Italy resounded to the premier's speech which marked fascists' seventh birthday.

Approximately 40,000 uniformed
fascists heard Mussolini speak Sunday at the villa Glori Hippodrome on the outskirts of Rome.
Amplifiers carried his words to
all the assembly and millions of
other persons throughout Italy
heard the speech by radio.

Mussolini warned the people to
eliminate parliamentary democracy.
"We tell the responsible factors
in other countries to do away
with verbose parliamentarism," he said "and to give more power to
and labor on an equal footing as
to survive."

"Comrade," he continued, "I am proud to state that both you and I are profoundly indifferent to all that is said or printed abroad. It
is perfectly logical that international democracy and liberalism
are lined up against us. The best proof that we really effected a revolution lies in the counter-revolution which we crushed and which endeavors to sharpen its perfidious weapons abroad."

"Our program still is unchanged.
It is to fight. Life is an incessant fight for fascists. We accept that and will fight intently. We gave the Italian people laws defending the fascist revolution and restoring the national life, also special laws for the army. We are faced with problems connected with the future of the navy and aviation. All this has been done in one year."

Short

detectives termed a "tangle of love
and larceny" was revealed with
the arrest of Mrs. Luis P. Berne,
brother Elliott Jane and Paul Rosenthal, with whom she eloped more
than a year ago.

This trio faces charges of passing
Florida.

The number of arrests was increased to five when Dr. Berne and his father-in-law, Herman Jaffe were held after they had broken the camera of a newspaper photographer at police headquarters.

Mrs. Berne is alleged to have carried on a love affair with Rosenthal son of a wealthy shirt manufacturer.
The money belonging to Dr.
Berne, which the eloping couple
took with them, was exhausted in Florida and according to police
story they resorted to worthless
checks.

Jaffe, the brother who was involved in the case as a "chaperone" faces charges of illegally
possessing a revolver and Mrs.
Berne and Rosenthal also will be
arraigned for alleged violation of the Mann act.

tained Royal Claim
To Last

By United Press
PALERMO, Italy, Mar. 29.—A half forgotten chapter of French
history came to public notice
again today with announcement
of the death of Philippe, Duke of Orleans, here.

He was the pretender to the throne of France. Never during
his life had he admitted that he
was not the rightful ruler of the French nation and he died leaving Prince Jean of Orleans, his cousin, heir to the title of "Pre-tender"—an hereditary of doubtful value.

Duke Philippe Robert was at
times almost forgotten as the
man who claimed the throne of France but was always remembered for his escapades which often connected social scandal
with his name.

Pneumonia brought on death.
At his bedside was Amelia, his sister. Prince Jean, the new pre-
tender, is enroute here.

The Duke of Orleans based his claims to the French throne on
his descent from Louis Philippe,
last king of France, whose reign
ended in 1848. The Duke was a great grand son of Louis Philippe.
Only once during his lifetime
did he visit the country he sought to rule. On that occasion he was thrown into prison under military
service laws, but was soon released, escorted to the border
and told not to return.

The idea of royal authority was
always strong with him and he
not long ago, while ill, and delirious in England, berated all
about him for "holding prisoner
the king of France."

Eleven Year Old Ban-
dit Victim Of Accident

CLEVELAND, O., March 29.— Steven Mogorydy, 11, described by the police as a "baby robber," was accidentally shot and killed with a stolen revolver, early today.

The shooting, according to detectives occurred as Steven and his brother Andrew, 20, returned home after looting the Magy Confectionery here.

The weapon, it was said, was among loot obtained by the brothers in the robbery. The little boy was examining the gun, police say, when it was accidentally
right eye.

Detectives, attracted to the Mogorydy home by the shot discovered the lad was shot.

Much loot from numerous robberies was found in the attic of
the home.

Fire originating from a chimney
flue, burned a hole about thirty-five
feet square in the shingle roof at
the home of Mrs. Anna G. Howard 131 E. Main St., and did damage estimated at $100 at 12 o'clock Sunday noon. Loss is fully covered by insurance.

Firemen used a large and small
chemical to extinguish the blaze.

May Neville, Expert, In Charge

"Woman's place is in the home." The old slogan means something quite different than when it was first said. Now, instead of spending her day cooking and sewing, looking after
the physical comforts of her family, the housewife must get such tasks off her hands with dispatch and attend to other duties brought on by our complex civilization.

MISS NEVILLE TELLS HOW
Miss May Neville, who will conduct the Gazette and Republican School of Cooking and Home Economics at the Opera House, four days, starting Tuesday, will tell women how they can make home attractive to husbands and children, and how to do it efficiently enough to reserve much time for themselves.

Miss Neville has conducted
cooking schools in various parts
of the country, and is prepared
to tell the housewives how to keep their family healthy and
happy and to make them delight
in coming home to meals, to keep
the home a pleasant living place
for the family, rather than just a sleeping place.

Miss Neville's cooking lessons
and demonstrations have won the
approval of housewives in all sections of the country. She has an-
ticular attention to brides during her classes.

Brides who buy their ham at
the delicatessen today will soon
learn the art of baking a ham in
their own ovens by the most simple and successful process. Miss Neville's lessons will not be limited. They will include instructions in everything from how
to make good coffee in an old-fashioned pot to how to make a cross-word puzzle cake. Gen-

Officer Interrupts Safe
Store

WEST MANSFIELD, O., Mar.
29.—Marshal Ray Middleworth
was shot and seriously wounded
here early today in a pistol duel
with two bandits, one of them
was captured.

The bandits had just dynamited
the safe in the Huffman general
store here when Middleworth
swooped down upon them, according to the Marshal's version of the story.

Both robbers fled, maintaining
a running gun fire as they sped
up the principal business street.
Middleworth retaliated but was brought down by a bullet in the shoulder.

Citizens drawn to the scene by
Courtney, 22, of Toledo. Courtney was captured after he had been pursued by hastily organized posse.

The bullet which brought down
the Marshal was fired by the captured man's companion, Mid-dleworth said. Physicians said
the officer will recover.

statewide campaign to re-open
Ohio coal mines—with non-union
labor if necessary, may be launched here the latter part of this week, it was declared here
today.

On Friday or Saturday, Ohio
operators who sent a committee
to Indianapolis in an effort to obtain consent from John L. Lewis,
President of the United Mine Workers for modification of the Jacksonville agreement, will assemble here to hear the commit-

WIFE OF UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR DIES MYSTERIOUSLY ON SUNDAY

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 29.—An-day in an effort to determine the cause of death. One physician expressed the opinion an overdose
of headache medicine caused Mrs.
Hoskins' death.

Prof. Hoskins is attached to the department of physiology at Ohio State.

A preliminary examination, according to physicians, revealed no traces of poison. A thorough chemical test will be necessary to establish this, however, they said.

Army Airmen in Record Flight

Jones (left) and Lieut. Lyman P. Whitten as a result of a non-stop flight they made from Dayton, O., to Boston, 725 miles, in five hours and 50 minutes. Not only did they establish a record for the distance, but they also proved the efficacy of new instruments intended

By United Press
Attorney General Crabbe, upon his return today of activities of federal internal revenue inspectors who were reported here checking income
tax returns in connection with
sales of equipment to the state highway department.

"I know nothing about them or
why they are here," said Crabbe.
"So far as I know there has been no request made for federal aid of any kind, in this investigation."

It was reported semi-officially
today that federal officers were checking tax returns made by persons who sold thousands of dollars worth of tractors and other equipment to the highway department
been excessive.

Such an inquiry it was believed
would be intended to disclose
whether any commissions or profits were turned over to politicians as campaign contributions in exchange for contracts.

The attorney general today will
confer with State Auditor Tracy,
as to the next move in their inquiry.

A grand jury investigation of the department has been demanded by Major W. S. Fowler, a Columbus attorney, who says he represents a citizen's committee organized for the purpose of disclosing fraud in state departments.

Whether there will be an investigation of Pealer's supplemental charge that the state has lost
thousands of dollars in automobile license funds interest was
not known.

GIBSON WITHDRAWS HIS CANDIDACY FOR GOVERNOR OF OHIO

Deposed Officer Not To Seek Office At Primaries

COLUMBUS, March 29.—For the "good of liberalism" H. C. Gibson, deposed state prohibition enforcement officer, today withdrew his recent declaration of candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor.

Gibson was discharged at the height of Governor Vic Donahey's
investigation of the state prohibition department. Subsequently he announced his candidacy on a platform advocating stringent modification of the dry laws.

The former dry officer's with-
C. Homer Durand, Coshocton, "wet" candidate for governor in the last two Republican primaries. He intimated Durand again will become a candidate.

"My withdrawal," Gibson said, "is
to prevent the possible effect my candidacy may have had on the cause of liberalism."

Gibson indicated he may become
a candidate for some other office.

Assassins Hired For $36
Because Victim Knew
Too Much

By United Press
POMEROY, O., March 29.—
A special grand jury was summoned today to investigate the brutal murder of James McCumber, 65, whose
body was found in an abandoned cistern three miles from
his home.

The jury it was announced, will consider the alleged
confessions of two hired assassins who have declared
John Bryant, a negro and supposed bootlegger, paid them $30 to dispose of McCumber.

Bryant and the two men, John Hedricks and Richard Rhoades,
are under arrest. Confessions
have been obtained from all three,
according to the county prosecutor.

The negro, it was declared today, sought McCumber's life because the aged man eavesdropped
on a bootlegger's rendezvous near here.

Authorities also were probing
the mysterious death of Mrs.
Susan Rhoades and Mrs. Pearl
Smith, in connection with the arrest of the three.

Both women, who were familiar with operations of the illicit liquor traffic here, died under mysterious circumstances, police declare.

Mrs. Rhoades who was said to have feared for her life, was burned to death. Mrs. Smith,
with her head crushed, was found
lying at the foot of the stairway
in her cellar.

McCumber, according to police,
was prepared to solve the two
mysteries when he was slain.

The negro's confession, as recounted by Rice, said in part:
"The whole thing was planned
alibi. Hedricks and Rhoades, I offered $30 to carry out the actual killing."

"It was very simple. When the party was in full swing so I wouldn't be missed, I slipped out.
I met Hedricks and Rhoades,
paid them their money and told
them the plans once more."

"We went to McCumber's door
and knocked. The organ in the house next door, was kicking up
a lot of noise. No one could have heard us. When he came to the door, we hit him on the head.

walking him up the road to the
cistern, where we had decided to hide the body. I went back to the party."

"Later Hedricks and Rhoades called me out and told me Mc-Cumber was dead."

up the story."
"He begged for mercy. But we beat him over the head again and then Rhoades shot him. Then we tumbled the body into the cistern, covered it with leaves and returned to the city."

McCumber vanished on March 15. Blood-stained walls hinted at murder and the arrest of ten men,
including the three held, followed.
All were released except Hed-
ricks, Rhoades and Bryant.

Wales submits to operation on ear

LONDON, March 29.—The Prince
of Wales was convalescent today
in St. James Palace from an attack of influenza and an operation consisting of an incision in his left ear-drum.

The official bulletin announcing
the successful operation, surprised the nation. The Prince's ear has been troubling him since Friday, following an attack of influenza
on Wednesday.

The attending physician explained that Wales condition was not serious and there was no cause for alarm.

Anonymous medical authorities
informed the local press today that
an operation such as Wales underwent usually is to relieve an abscess and that it usually slightly affects the hearing of the pierced ear.

ATTAINS BOYHOOD
AMBITION ON BENCH

CLEVELAND, March 29.—Common Pleas Judge Carl V. Weygandt obtained his boyhood ambition to his day. He came back today to the common pleas bench there as a judge.

Before his bar will appear all his old schoolmates and in addition his father, William E. Weygandt, who is also an attorney, will probably have to plead cases before his son
for Cleveland to attend Western Reserve University Law School and then practiced law in Cleveland before he was made a judge here. It is his first official visit to Wooster.

BATHING SEASON
OFFICIALLY OPENED

LORAIN, O., March 29.—Miss Helen McCalla, celebrated the first day of Spring by diving in Lake Erie here.

As a result she is believed to have attained the distinction of officially opening 1926 bathing season for the Great Lakes. While a party of men and women stood by shivering in their overcoats in the near freezing temperature, Miss McCalla broke a hole in the ice and plunged in.

Miss McCalla is a reporter on the Lorain Journal.

has made a land grant of two million acres on the Pacific near Ma-

EXAMPLE OF STILL MAKER'S ART

CLEVELAND, O., March 29.—
Federal prohibition agents
are exhibiting a 1926 model still here. The still seized in a raid in Mansfield, has no coil.

It has two sections. The top compartment, holding cold water, contains an inverted cone.

The bottom of the still contains the boiling mash.

Clevo Angst, alleged inven-
tor of the still, is at liberty under a bond of $3,500, pending his trial in federal court.

He was arrested by the federal agents who went on the
raid in Mansfield last week.

They believe this still is one of
the newest type of "inventions"
of its kind.

Copyright, 1925, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

MARY WAITE shares two rooms with

STANLEY BLAKE. Mary has few friends, but Celia goes out frequently in the evening, though she does not tell with whom. Mary finds that Celia and Stanley see each other frequently, although Stanley is married. Mary goes to supper with

PAT HAMILTON, whom she has met before but whose attentions she has refused because he is married, and sees Celia and Stanley at another table. Mrs. Blake learns that Stanley is going around with some girl, and thinks it is Mary. She telephones Mary, threatening to make trouble unless Mary leaves town at once. Celia disappears. Mary sees Hamilton again, and he arranges for her to go to New York and work for a friend of his. Mary goes to work in New York for

spinster, and meets his son

WILL CRANDALL, who is very nice to her. She motors into the country with Will on Saturday afternoon, and they are stranded on a back road when the car runs out of gas.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XXXII—UNPLEASANT POSSIBILITIES

MARY followed Pat Hamilton across a corner of the hotel lobby to the dining-rooms, hardly realizing what she was doing.

She did not see Will Crandall glance over at her in perplexity, watching her so earnestly after he recognized her that one of the girls with him began to tease him about it. Her mind was on the advice Pat Hamilton had just given her.

So she must be more like the Hewitt girls, must she, if she wanted Will to care for her. Hamilton knew the world well, she told herself; his advice would probably be good. And oh, how much she did want Will to care!

Yet he already cared, her heart told her. Yes, replied her mind, but how long would he care, and how much? These other girls, with their lovely clothes, their leisure in which to rest and make themselves attractive, their gay spirits that came from never working until they were exhausted—how soon would he turn to them?

"If he really loves me he'll go right on loving me, just as I am," she told herself, leaning back in her chair and staring down at the table while Hamilton ordered dinner. That was what she wanted to believe. But how sure could she be that it was true?

She tried hard to be entertaining when Hamilton turned to her again, to appreciate his efforts to give her a good time. But it was difficult. "Everything going all right? Old Crandall easy to work for?" he asked her. "Since you're bound to work I'd like you to be well fixed. But see here, Mary—think over what I said to you about doing a little better by yourself. You can afford to, with the salary you're getting from Crandall."

"I want to pay back the money I owe you," Mary told him. "After that I'll think about spending more on myself."

"Nonsense—you can take the rest of your life to pay me," he retorted. "Now, you could live at this hotel if you wanted to. I have a special arrangement with the manager, as you know, on some advertising he hasn't paid for—I take it out in staying here when I'm in town. I'll make that arrangement for you, so that you can get a little room somewhere here for just half what it would cost ordinarily. How does that sound? Then get yourself a few clothes, and—well, everything'll look

BY MY HALIDOM! FENCING, ONCE ONLY EUROPEAN, MAY BE REVIVED IN U. S.

Is the gentle art of fencing going to stage a come-back?

Now then a certain quality of gentlemen carry ugly black automatics in their hip-pockets and arguments are settled on the spur of the moment and on the quickness of the draw without waiting for sunrise or the arrival of the police.

But, thanks to Hollywood, Douglas Fairbanks and a couple of dozen fencing instructors who have invaded this country in the wake of the movies, there seem indications that the use of the fencing sword will be revived as a pastime of the idle sportsman if not for bloodier purposes.

Italian method requiring more physical movement and the French great ability and quickness of the wrist and arm. The German method is even more strenuous than the Italian.

The sport has definite and elaborate rules and a strict system of etiquette. The ordinary fencing rapier is from thirty-three to thirty-four inches in length and of course the point only is used. The sabre is still the cutting weapon however, with a technique of its own.

Because contracts of motion picture stars almost always call for proficiency in fencing, many of the best instructors are located in Los Angeles and Hollywood. Fairbanks in his new picture, "The Black Pirate," and in another recent picture, "Don Q, Son of Zorro," proved he has attained excellency in swordsmanship.

An increasing number of athletic clubs also are adopting the sport and it may be that in the future, America will produce swordmen to rival those of Europe, where fencing is a national sport in many countries.

PROFESSOR Edgar Furniss, of the Yale political science department, is optimistic on the future of politics and government in the United States. He doesn't predict a revolution nor sudden revolutionary change for the better, but sees the nation politically, in process of evolution.

He is confident that "soon there will be a change in governmental activity in the United States, and public service will be raised to a higher plane." Perhaps this hope is based on his second prediction that "the time is not far off when a life of politics will meet more approval than it does at the present time."

Professor Furniss blames prevailing political conditions and the too common disrespect for and distrust of office-holders and politicians upon democracy's tendency to put a premium on mediocrity. His observations convince him that "men of ability are often looked upon as being removed from the true spirit of the nation. They are even thought undemocratic in that they are not sharing their honors and distinction with the common people."

Too often the men and women peculiarly qualified to solve the intricate problems of government are not shrewd enough politicians to have themselves elected to office, a condition that cannot be abated until the majority of the voters is able to discern unerringly between the "vote-getter" and the statesman or political scientist. The government in a republic is what the people make it. Better governmental executives and wiser legislators mean better government.

ARCHAEOLOGISTS burst forth in extravagant praises of a fragment of a crudely shaped and painted urn dug from the dust of 4,000 years, while the unscientific lady usually pays only a dispassionate homage to even more ancient and far more magnificent temples and tombs. There are exceptions, when the heart of the ordinary man beats as rapidly as that of the antiquarian, and one such exception was the discovery of a kitchen in the temple of the moon goddess at Ur.

The old kitchen was more spacious, if not better, than modern tuck-away kitchenettes and in some respects equaled the latter in convenience. It had a brick and asphalt floor with a well sunk in its center. The cook stoves, for burning wood and charcoal, were not as clean and efficient as the modern gas and electric appliances, but they must have boiled and grilled dishes fit for kings and even goddesses.

Simplified housekeeping, small households, and the delicatessen store have combined to do away with the large old-fashioned kitchen, once a typical American institution and center of the house, but it still holds an affectionate place in memory.

The discovery of the kitchen at Ur must have revived in the minds of countless Americans sweet memories of those "dim, dead days beyond recall" when the kitchen was the cornerstone of the great American home.

THE COMMUNITY'S HEALTH

THERE is not a person in this city, or country either for that matter, who is not vitally concerned in the health of the community. It is important that the most rigid sanitary regulations should have force not only here but in every city throughout this country. For epidemics of disease can be kept to a minimum. They are the greatest wasters of life.

A pre-war estimate by a leading sanitarian places the average value of a human life at $3,600, and the average cost of medical attention and nursing care for each case of typhoid fever, for instance, as $200. On this basis in one small town epidemic, 55 cases of typhoid cost $11,000 and in addition the loss of vital capital because of six deaths was $21,600.

There is a lot of money to be taken out of a community. Let us not consider it even from a humanitarian standpoint. It is really not good business policy to let such things happen. Public health is purchasable. Within natural limits every community can determine its own death rate.

Modern health methods include infant welfare, child welfare, prevention of communicable diseases and the sanitation of the community. Money invested in public health pays a dividend to every member of the community. A healthful community will not only have more money to spend on the necessities and luxuries of life, but it will attract trade from a wider territory. Health is a business proposition.

So some thoughtless neighbors spoke of the children of one of our families. It grieves us. Unfortunately, the beautiful old word "Charity" has fallen into evil ways with the public. It seems to mean the doling out of relief by lantern-jawed investigators and social detectives to those persons whom they deem "worthy." God help us! Are not all men worthy of friendly service and encouragement? Is not material relief simply a sort of morphine relief which cures but only temporarily relieves the pain, while the other treatment is applied to restore the social health? Because of the public degradation of the word "charity" many associations have recently changed their names. Our own name, Social Service League, should more truly represent the family service for which we stand.

A few years ago the League was caring for an aged couple. The man was ill unto death, yet many good people criticized the League because they spent time and money on such "unworthy" people. This case came to the attention of one of Xenia's "noble men" who came to the League and advanced money for one month's rent for this couple. We afterward heard that this gentleman said he was interested in the "unworthy" poor. Truly such a spirit is most refreshing to discouraged social workers.

Mr. L. S. Seever, acting Xenia freight agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, will become the new agent at South Charleston. W. R. Torrence, Cedarville man, agent at South Charleston for several years, will probably be promoted to position of agent in Xenia.

The postoffice at Alpha is to be discontinued from April 14. Postmaster Ridenour will surrender responsibility at that time. Poor patronage is the reason.

AN EASTER PARTY

The week following Easter Sunday is a popular time for giving an Easter Party. Daffodils, tulips, narcissus or violets lend themselves ideally for either house or table decoration. Or if the hostess cannot afford real flowers, she may decorate bare tree boughs with artificial leaves and paper blossoms to suit her fancy. The successful hostess is she who never fails in originality.

Dancing to the phonograph or radio is popular among the young folks; often older people prefer auction bridge, but many find an evening of ridiculous games and contests the most fun of all. Try the following:

Millinery Contest: From your friends and neighbors collect as many old hats as there are to be guests. Heap these on a table in the living room. Explain to your guests that each player, at a signal from you, is to snatch up the hat—any hat—(except that the men must snatch men's hats, and the women women's) and rush with it to the opposite wall of the room, where you have hung several mirrors; he or she must put on the hat before the mirror.

rolling course, I think. Where all his twenty-footer puts roll to the cup and sink. There may be bunkers on it, and there may be pits of sand. But in them, as he plays the game, his good shots never land.

A golfer's dream of heaven, is a drive without a slice. An iron shot that holds the line, and lies forever nice.

Yet if there's golf in heaven, and all golfers good arrive, And each one is rewarded with that blessed perfect drive; If no one shanks a mashie, and no split ever peeks, If the golf balls fly from brassies and from jiggers and from cleeks, And they carry pits and bunkers and drop stony at the cup, There will never be an angel who can boast that he's one up.

Then the other sainted golfer will be good as you and I, He will drive as far we do, and he'll find as nice a lie, And we'll never see him bunkered, and we'll never see him slice, And he'll sink his twenty-footers, which will not be very nice. So a golfer's dream of heaven isn't one that I would choose.

Easter Egg Contest: This is an old game, but still a popular one. Color oval pieces of cardboard with crayons to represent colored eggs. Hide these all over several rooms. He or she who finds the most paper eggs before a signal rings to announce the hunt up, wins a candy egg as a prize.

Pussy Willow Contest: Give everybody a pencil and a sheet of paper with pussy willow pasted in one corner. See who can write the most words beginning with "cat" or having "cat" as one syllable, in five minutes.

Devilled Eggs, sandwiches cut in egg shape, cup cakes topped with tiny cotton rabbits (stuck into the icing by means of a long pin) and coffee, will make suitable refreshment.

STORY OF JENNIE COWAN

One of the most tragic and pathetic stories of the days of Indian occupancy of this section of Ohio at the time when the Shawnee village at Oldtown was in its ascendancy, was the remarkable adventure of Mrs. Jennie Cowan, great-grand aunt of the late Rev. James G. Carson, former pastor of the Second United Presbyterian Church in Xenia.

During the middle eighties of the eighteenth century, when Jennie Cowan with her husband and young daughter, were living with her family in the Shawnee settlement, she was captured by the men and took the women prisoners, including Mrs. Cowan.

She was taken by her savage captors to headquarters of the tribe at Oldtown. As a gruesome punishment, she was compelled to carry the scalp of her husband, who was slain during the fighting.

Mrs. Cowan was forced to serve an old squaw during her captivity and subjected to cruel treatment and drudgery.

For seven years Jennie Cowan was held captive at the Shawnee village. She won the admiration of one of the Shawnee braves but refused his offer of marriage. His open admiration did not abate and found tangible expression in arranging for her to escape.

He planned for a shooting match at his station on the Mad River and appointed a comrade and a young Indian woman there to meet the captive secretly and conduct her safely to Ft. Detroit.

Not long after her return to her old home, she was married to a settler. Two years later a marauding band of Cherokees from the Georgia country, again took her captive. Her daughter was also taken away. They were held in captivity for two years.

After nine years among the red-skins, the woman was released through an exchange of captives between the whites and Indians.

"Fascinating, isn't it?" asks Mitzi and Dad replies absent-mindedly, "quite mediaeval." It doesn't seem just the word, but Mitzi and Polly are too polite to contradict. It doesn't occur to them that Dad's interest in a piece of statuary is necessarily slight if there also happens to be a pretty girl in sight. The lady (extreme right) wears a dress that evidently derived its inspiration from some crusading gentleman's best fighting clothes. This is only one of the mediaeval phenomena that are appearing in the styles for spring and summer.

Polly and Mitzi themselves offer two notable examples of this tendency to glorify, not middle age, but the middle ages. They are both wearing dresses cut according to the new Page Boy silhouette—a trimly fitted bodice, a waistline nearly normal, a short flaring peplum and a short straight skirt. Eleanor, who has joined the party, is doing her share of the proper thing by wearing another mediaeval frock—with a full sized shield emblazoned on the front—reminiscent of the days when stripes were not considered disgraceful. Even her hat is a helmet!

Today's Talk

The sure things in this life come after we have gone along. If we could understand the secret back of the beauty of the pansy, it would no longer have charm for us. Character is beautiful because there is mystery behind it—latent strength, uncovered knowledge, vastness of vision, buried interest.

In the Bible there is this phrase: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." We go to sleep in faith and arise to the new things of an undiscovered day. It is only as we accept the opportunity for exploration that we grow and enlarge all that we are.

If we could see the results of all our strivings before they were under way, we would become weaklings, afraid and full of trembling most of the time. It is the very fact that we are called upon to dare, to risk and to hope that teaches us not to falter under fire.

There is a great deal of God in a man when he looks upon reality as something to be smiled at and passed by.

Steel of the highest order must go through the most intense heat and be tried. All its weak dross must be melted away.

Character must go through the same process. But we are our own architects and build the places we live in. They are an expression of what we are and represent.

MODERN FARM HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY AT NOON

Ten-room, two-story frame home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Clemmer, on their farm, four miles east of Jamestown at Rosemore station, was entirely destroyed by fire, Saturday noon.

Cause of the blaze has not been determined but it is thought that fire under chicken incubators in the rear of the house, started the conflagration. The blaze was discovered at 11 o'clock by Mrs. Clemmer and she and her husband sought the assistance of neighbors. Fire quickly spread over the entire structure and only furniture on the first floor was salvaged.

Barn and other farm buildings standing some distance from the house were saved from the flames by neighbors who operated an electric water pump.

The Clemmer home was entirely modern and was one of the most attractive in the vicinity. Loss was partially insured. Mr. and Mrs. Clemmer are living in a tenant house on the farm.

NO ESCORT LEAGUE NOW ORGANIZED BY CALIFORNIA CO-EDS

BERKELEY, Cal., March 29—Feminine freedom—that's what these individualistic co-eds want. On the rolls beneath the names of Carrie Chapman Catt and Emmeline Pankhurst will be inscribed the names of Geraldine Casati, Katherine Nixon, Gertrude Wright and Helen Phillips.

They are University of California students who have solved the "man problem" by declaring independence to it. They are leaders of Gamma Epsilon Pi and Phi Chi Theta societies whose membership embraces some of the university's most prominent and popular co-eds.

Rebellious at the very idea of sitting around waiting for patronizing men to invite them to dances and parties, they have inaugurated a "no escort league." The girls have taken solemn pledges that they will attend college functions unaccompanied by any masculine guidance.

After the female minds of the campus have been educated to the idea so that it will be more or less generally accepted as a matter of course, these original thinkers will make the revolutionary proposal that the ladies alone do the bidding, inviting such men as they please to escort them.

WHAT MY RELIGION MEANS TO ME

WM. H. TILFORD
First Presbyterian Church
My Religion is "Christianity."
A Christianity which implies—

"the kind of life whose spirit and method reproduce as accurately as possible the Spirit and Method of the Life of Christ."

My religion means to me, an appreciation of the God of "The Bible"; as revealed therein, as Creator, as our Heavenly Father, as a Living Moving Spirit within the realm of the human. A fellowship of a spiritual relationship with the Son of God—Jesus Christ. The fellowship being contingent on a previous redemption from the guilt and infirmities of sin; with a subsequent reconciliation of my life with God.

My religion means to me, an appreciation of Man. Christianity evaluated a human life on earth, and made it priceless, as to the soul, in relation to Eternity. My religion means that every aspiration of the Soul of man shall be compensated in an Everlasting Life. This appreciation of man prompts the belief in the possibility of the Salvation of Man, material and spiritual, unmindful of race or color. Christianity is a great civilizing force in the world.

My religion means to me, a Faith in the eternal rightness of the Beneficent, Providential, God-directed universe of matter, man and spirit; submissive to all that is beyond the touch of man, un-submissive when within the reach of man's power to modify or change apparent inevitableness. Man is God's agent in man's sphere.

Practically—My religion means to me, kindness of purpose, sincerity of motive, helpfulness, forgiveness, co-operativeness, a desire to heal the wounds of the world, but to Christianize those who make the wounds. A daily living in a Fellowship with Christ as his agent to extend the helping hand to all in need, giving a word of encouragement to the fallen, performing a deed of kindness to the suffering, extending a hand in pity to those whose conduct has led them astray. Following as far as humanity possible the description of our Ideal Christ—"He went about doing good." That we might "Go about doing good."

This is "What My Religion means to me." The expression may be better than the living, but our daily prayer is that I and others would live, "What My Religion means to me."

The Only Pure Milk Is Milk That Has Been PASTEURIZED

Raw milk, in spite of the most careful handling, is not free from germs. This has been fully demonstrated by the most careful scientific tests. Proper pasteurization of milk destroys any pathogenic organisms which might be present in raw milk and these bacteria cause tuberculosis, typhoid, scarlet fever and diphtheria. On the other hand pasteurization does not destroy the natural healthful organisms in the milk nor does it mar its fresh, sweet flavor.

Since milk is absolutely essential to the physical development of children and the health of adults it is imperative that safe milk be available at all times.

HELEN SANTMYER TELLS ABOUT LADY ASTOR'S DANCE IN LETTER

Miss Helen Santmyer, author of "Herbs and Apples," daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Santmyer, of Third St., who has been in London doing literary work for several months, was a guest at a dance given by Viscountess Astor at her home, 4 St. James Square, London, March 15.

Graphic account of the dance, in Miss Santmyer's individual style, is given in a letter received from her by her father. Excerpts from the letter are as follows:

"I enclose the account of the dance from the Times—as you can see, the aristocracy, youth, beauty and wealth of England were there but unless people were pointed out to you, you didn't recognize them, except the few whose pictures are well-known.

"Marj (her London companion) and I went together at about 10:30 and arrived at the end of an awning surrounded by a gapping and admiring throng. . . . Of course the house—4 St. James's Square—is a huge and magnificent place, the sort of house I had never been in before until after it had been turned into a museum. The dressing rooms were on the first floor—we checked our coats and went up a stupendous staircase with shagging steps. But they weren't shaking. Lady Astor's secretary stood outside the ballroom door—you told him your name, he shouted it to her where she stood in the door—and he had evidently scanned the names carefully, because he got them the first time. Unusual, in a receiving line."

"Lady Astor, is a most amusing and remarkable person—short, slight, fair, very lovely looking, of course, as everyone knows, but with a raucous voice like a foghorn. A really dreadful voice—due to public speaking no doubt—as American as Plymouth Rock, with no English accent—yet in spite of its hoarseness and loudness, not unpleasant—simply funny. When you heard it at the other end of the ball room, it didn't make you shudder, it simply made you laugh. She wore a cloth of gold dress, very simple, with a short flaring skirt, and her diamond coronet, which wasn't so impressive as it might have been, because it wouldn't stay on straight—the peak of it generally rose above one eyebrow. Before the evening had advanced very far she removed it and went around the rest of the night with untidy hair and red marks on her forehead. She is very half-fellow-well-met, yet not unpleasantly so. I suppose she's a good politician—but she is certainly a captivating person. And such vitality! Her husband was there—of course—a nice looking man—I mean, one who looks nice and her oldest son, who is at Oxford.

"When we were first there the floor was packed and jammed and we couldn't see anyone we knew—but it was an exceedingly well managed dance and no women were left standing on the side-lines. Mrs. Wiley, the wife of the head, manager or whatever you call it, was there to see that the boys were introduced to the girls and the result was that after the first few minutes you weren't alone for the rest of the evening. The first boy you danced with passed you on to another. . . . I must say that nationalities didn't mix much—English danced with English and Americans with Americans. I was dancing when the Prince came in, just beside the door, so I saw Lady Astor courtesy to him and when he danced with her they were right next to us, elbow to elbow. In fact, I may have stepped on his toes because I was dancing with a short boy who couldn't see over me and didn't know who was behind us and they were so close I couldn't tell him.

"The Prince looks very fagged and old—whitened with blood-shot eyes. The number of things he has to appear at is enough to send him into an early grave. He is small like his father, shorter than I and very slight. He danced only with his hostess and stayed only a little while, upstairs at least. I believe he had supper downstairs in the dining room where the nobility and royalty were fed. The rest of us ate and drank in between dances at a long table spread with cakes and sandwiches in a vast room across the stair hall from the ballroom. Lady Astor being a prohibitionist, the drinks were only lemonade, orangeade and a very mild claret cup. It was not a disorderly party!

The celebrities whom I recognized and who were pointed out to me were Sir James Barrie, the Baldwins, the editor of the Times, whose name I don't know, because Lady Astor introduced him as "that horrible man who edits the Times." He is short, stocky, rather nice looking, with the smallest feet I have ever seen on human male. Mr. Amoy, who is foreign secretary or something of the sort, a tiny man, about up to my shoulder, who looks like a cork when he dances; the Countess of Clarendon, who is a

Because he was a great pantomimist he was not fit to be a picture star. So they hardened their hearts against him and couldn't "see" him on the screen. After years of pathetic pleas for a chance to show what he could do in the movies W. C. Fields, riot on the vaudeville stage and "Follies" headliner has scored a "knockout" in filmdom.

It is understood that Fields' contract with Famous Players calls for a salary payment of $400,000 for six pictures and it is predicted that he will withdraw from Ziegfeld's "Follies" to start work in pictures.

Fields has come to the great goal after twenty-five years of lonely wandering. "After tramping all over the civilized world the magic wand of the movies has delivered Bill such a wallop on the shoulder that his whole frame is quivering," says the Literary Digest.

For the past ten years he has been playing in the Ziegfeld "Follies" on Broadway, and still he couldn't get into the movies. Before that he was a vaudeville actor who did an act alone in front of the curtain. He is one of the world's best pantomimists. After traveling over the world making people laugh and never saying a word, he was given a Broadway chance with the "Follies." For eight years, from 1914 to 1922, he played his comedy turn with them, jumped for a year to another producer and then into a straight play. His chance to speak had come.

D. W. Griffith bought the picture rights to the play in which Fields was working. He engaged Fields and last summer they

When he became too heavy to ride in the saddle he turned to training harness horses. Incidentally, when Frank was in England in 1873, he rowed No. 4 on the winning American barge in the noted race between England and America of that year.

From 1873 to 1881, he raced and trained harness horses for his brother, Sam, in the United States, and helped in no small degree, to put harness racing on the American turf. In 1881, he came to Cleveland and was employed to race and train horses for the Forest City farm, owned by C. F. Emery. On the site of the Emery farm, now stands the famous beautiful North Randall race track of the Grand Circuit.

Emery sent Caton to Russia with twenty head of thoroughbreds, the best being Winterset and Wintergreen, which won many races in Russia. Caton returned to Cleveland in 1893 but went back to the land of the czar in 1894. In 1902, he was presented to the czar, and became his favorite trainer. The czar's sport-loving brother, Grand Duke Michael, took a liking to Caton, and for many years, racing for royalty, he won millions of dollars in purses for the czar and the grand duke.

of the nobility, Caton returned to America, having lost his money and horses in the upheaval. He spent the rest of his years in Cleveland.

FRANK CATON, CZAR NICHOLAS' FRIEND, SUCCEUMS RECENTLY

CLEVELAND, O., Mar. 29.—Frank Caton, who was a personal friend of Nicholas, the czar of the Russians, and who won millions of dollars for the royal family, while it was in its heyday of monarchical supremacy, has passed away at the age of 74.

Caton was one of the most colorful figures in the racing world. Born in Northville, Mich., September 3, 1852, Caton was the son of John D. Caton. The elder Caton together with the famous General Custer of "Last Stand" renown, owned running horses together.

Before he was 16, young Frank was running horses in the famous "Quarter" races, the old Indian fighter staged with John Caton. It was there, under Custer's expert knowledge and tutelage, that Frank Caton learned
